Galway

The most fantastic city in Ireland

History of Galway

Her name come of river name Corrib who cross the city of the West
It was before town of fisherman and was invaded in 1230 by Anglonormands and they built a citadel with ramparts.
In the Middle Ages it slowly became a commercial port with Spain and France.
In the 16th century it becomes the capital of the West.
In 1970 it became the 4th agglomération of the Republic of Ireland.

In the city center of Galway there is a Cathedral. It is very recent (1958-1965) but also very impressive from the outside and the inside.

Kayaking activity, accompanied by a professional, on the Corrib to the largest lake in Ireland. The 3 hours activity is very funny with the family.

Visit Galway City in several stops with your family by bus. It is a good attraction for everyone, you can see Eyre Square.

The Galway City Museum, opened in 2006, is next to the Corrib. It tells the History of the city from the Middle Ages until today.
